

IRON SKILLET

Iron Skillet is a Houston based band making their debut appearance on KPFT 90.1 FM Wide Open Space w/ Roark on November 13th, 2013.

The musical styles of the members of Iron Skillet are drastically different from one another, yet there is some unknown common thread running through them all. Somehow, J.W. Americana's western punk "Tony the Pony" meshes perfectly with the western roots of Jimmy James' "Where the Hell's Johnny Cash?"!

People stand in amazement at the duality between amplification and beat up acoustics. That's the beauty of Iron Skillet. Some bring the iron, others bring the skillet.

Iron Skillet is described by some as a rock and roll band from the southern tip of the northern part of the south. Others claim they are a country band from the northern tip of the southern part of the north. Members and fans of Iron Skillet enjoy a broad swath of musical styles and genres.

Rodney Chinelliott a.k.a. J.W. Americana (Co-Singer/Songwriter; lead/rhythm guitar) brings the band towards a rousing, anything goes, anthemic free-for-all.

Jimmy James (Co-Singer/Songwriter; rhythm guitar) keeps that all in check and drives the band back to reality with sweet words and deeply provocative wisdom and rhythm.

If that doesn't make your musical mouth water then add in Scott N. Carr (Pianist/Keyboardist) to the mix. Giving the band a solid roots feel and flavor.

Steve Candaleri (Drummer) is one h-h-heck of a drummer. A veritable timepiece of flesh and bones. A drummers drummer.

Keith Polk (Bassist) not only takes the drums to the pocket, he sews the jeans! Making contra-melodies when narry a contra-melody can be found.
